

Purpose & Content

- Family life is very important in the Chinese culture, including the extended family and three generational families.
- This two-day workshop is for the helping professionals working or planning to work with families. How should the counselors work to explore the family dynamics? How should the inner resources of the family members be used in moving the family towards more healthy, harmonious & balanced? The form of the workshop will be experiential and skills development focused. Personal application of the material to be covered in the program by the program participant will be encouraged.
- The program will attempt to cover the following points based on available time. The group will assist in setting priorities of material to be covered.

Conceptualization

- The Satir Model's view of family therapy within the Chinese culture;
- The issues individual family members & the family have.

Application of the Satir Model in Various Types of Cases

- Resolving conflict, especially between parents and children;
- Reducing the impact of an illness and misfortune on other family members;
- How to build a positive, caring, accepting relationship among the extended family members;
- Other issues raised by the participants.

Intervention

- Making contact & exploring the issues & dynamics of the family;
- Moving the family from problem focused to positively directional goals;
- Hearing the specific problems in terms of the larger & deeper context such as yearnings;
- Dealing with the negative past & building up the resources of the past for use in the present;
- Moving from blaming, placating, super-reasonable and irrelevant to congruence;
- Applying the Satir Model tools on family therapy – temperature reading, parts-party, Mandala, family maps, stances, the “ingredients of interaction”, sculpting, reframing, humor, visualization, accepting self & others, maintenance kit, forgiveness, de-enmeshing, working with self, other & context in the Chinese culture;
- When to do individual therapy while working with the whole family systemically?

Method of Teaching

- Lecture
- Exercises
- Presentation of Case
- Live Demonstration (Maximum 3 Family Demonstrations)
- Debriefing

Participants are welcome to bring their own clients. The therapists with cases selected for demonstration will present the cases to the group before the families come in. The trainer will work with the families after the presentation and follow with a debriefing after the families depart. Maximum three cases will be chosen. Therapists should sign up with office no later than 25 Jul 09 in case they would like to bring their cases for demonstration.
